

CHAPMAN IS GOING BACK

Extradition Order was Granted by Judge Taylor To-Day.

MRS. MATTHEWS PLACED ON TRIAL

The Woman is Still Very Ill and is Suffering From Trouble With Lungs.

The courtroom was crowded this morning, when the decision of Judge Taylor to surrender James Chapman for extradition, was announced. His Honor said that the counsel for the prosecution, had pointed out to him very clearly that, under the extradition laws, if a judge has any suspicion of guilt on the part of the accused, it was his duty to surrender the prisoner. He allowed that the evidence was not very strong against the accused, but he had a suspicion that the accused was guilty, therefore he ordered him to be detained at Fort Saskatchewan for 15 days, and thereafter to be surrendered to the state of Oklahoma. Chapman had therefor, 15 days in which to institute habeas corpus proceedings, which Chapman's counsel, Mr. Rogers, announced would most certainly be done.

Chapman, who seemed to be in excellent spirits—talking and laughing with his legal adviser—left the court with a slightly set as though he had not a care in the world.

Mrs. Matthews on Trial
Mrs. Matthews trial was then proceeded with, as she was able to attend in court. She looked exceedingly ill and Mr. Robertson said that she would have to be under medical attendance for some time to come, as her lungs are in a bad condition.

In opening the case Mr. Robertson took exception, both to the information laid by Dr. J. E. Jones of Oklahoma against Mrs. Matthews, and to the warrant issued for her arrest. The warrant was for the joint arrest of Chapman and Mrs. Matthews, therefore, counsel said, they must be tried jointly and no evidence given in her absence could be used against her. He also objected that the confession made by Chapman was no evidence against his client.

The information by Dr. J. E. Jones against the accused was then read to her and Judge Taylor remanded her until Monday at 2.30.

Mr. Robertson asked that Mrs. Matthews might be acquitted at this place, other than the R. N. W. M. barracks, to which His Honor replied that he quite understood that, without casting any reflection on the police, the government should provide some better accommodation for prisoners or else take the risk of quartering them elsewhere. Mrs. Matthews was then sent back to the barracks till Monday.

BETTER THAN WHEAT

"Virgin alfalfa lands in Western Canada are fully equal in value, acre for acre, with the highest-priced lands in the United States."

This statement was made by Professor Thomas Shaw, late of the Minnesota State Agricultural College at Minneapolis, formerly of the staff of the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, and now associate editor of the "Orange Judd Farmer," one of the most influential farm papers in the United States, in a recent magazine article demonstrating the superiority of mixed farming as compared with straight wheat growing.

The best alfalfa lands in Western Canada lie all around Edmonton. Professor Shaw is quite familiar with the resources of the Edmonton country, having taken great interest in its great possibilities in the way of fodder crops, on the occasion of two visits to Edmonton. It was the Professor who first stated that the land about Edmonton "is too good to devote to growing wheat," meaning that where conditions are so favorable for mixed farming, the advantages would not be turned to the most profitable use by devoting the land exclusively or mainly to wheat.

SMALLPOX GAVE REPRIEVE

Man who was to be hanged on May 20th Gets Respite.

Ottawa, May 24.—The cabinet has granted a reprieve until June 21st to Walter Ross, who was to have been hanged at North Bay on May 20th for the murder of Percy Parkinson, his companion. The reason given is that the fall at North Bay is under quarantine. In the meantime, Ross' counsel will endeavor to have a further examination as to the condemned man's sanity.

NO TRACES FOUND OF NORMAN FRANCE

Disappearance of Little Boy Near Elkhorn, Man., is Still a Complete Mystery.

Elkhorn, May 24.—Another day of failure has been recorded in the search for little Norman France. The mysterious bundle carried by Indians near Manson proved to be four little puppies which were too young to keep up with the boys when traveling. The story that a white child was seen with a squaw travelling southward here is being carefully considered to be the product of some inventive mind.

WARRANT FOR A. M. PARKIN.

St. Paul, Minn., May 24.—A warrant has been issued here for the arrest of A. M. Parkin, who was formerly organizer for R. B. Bennett in Calgary, and who, Faulkner said, offered to buy shares in the A. & G. W.

CUSTOMS MEN ARE ACTIVE

Former Governor of New Hampshire Placed Under Arrest.

WARRANTS AGAINST WIFE ALSO Charge Against Them is of Bringing in Goods Without Paying Duty.

New York, May 24.—Frank W. Rollins, former governor of New Hampshire, and now a banker with Boston office, his wife, Catherine, and his son Douglas, were charged today in a sworn statement of the customs officer with conspiring "to smuggle into the United States wearing apparel and goods without paying or accounting for duties legally due thereon."

Mr. Rollins and his son were released on $2000 bail. Neither would talk for publication. Mrs. Rollins was so prostrated that she took to her bed in a hotel immediately on landing from the Lassinian. She will answer to the charges against her as soon as she is recovered.

WAYS OF RAISING MONEY

Regent of D. O. E. Declares Against Afternoon Card Parties.

Toronto, May 24.—In her annual address as Regent of the National Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire, Mrs. Nordheimer reviewed the patriotic and philanthropic aims of the order, the efforts to assist in stamping out tuberculosis.

Strong disapproval of raising money for the I. O. O. F. by afternoon card parties was expressed. The example set by mothers and sisters to the young people was far from wholesome, and that it is done all over England should be no excuse.

"Let us take," said the speaker, "all that is best from the mother country, but do not bring into this fresh young land the faults and sins of the old world. Do not let our women take to card playing in God's sunlight."

HAVE FRENCH A GRIEVANCE

Paper Complains of Lack of Interpreter at Land Office.

THE COMPLAINT IS DENIED

K. W. McKenzie Says Situation is Only Temporary and That no one has Suffered.

"We had, this week, a visit from one of our subscribers, Mr. M. F. Beauchamp, of Edson," says the Courier de l'Ouest, "who informed us of the unsatisfactory position in which French-speaking people are when they have to obtain any information at the Edmonton Land Office."

"We very willingly echo the complaints of Mr. Beauchamp, drawing attention to the deficiency, strongly prejudicial to our compatriots, which results from absence at the Land Office of any person who speaks French."

"We are today in a period when French and French-Canadian immigration is most active. Every train coming from the East brings with it our compatriots speaking little or even no English, and when these people go to the Land Office to obtain information in regard to the free lands they are unable to understand."

"It is to be deeply regretted that, in this country where the two languages are official in Parliament and in the Federal service, our compatriots in Edmonton should be less well provided for than the Germans and Galicians, for example, who can obtain any information at the Land Office in their own language."

"The present situation evidently cannot last any longer."

"Correspondence in French suffers especially and some have not yet received any answer to letters sent several weeks ago."

"The 'Courier de l'Ouest' prints the above extract in this week's issue. 'Correspondence in French' sent to the Land Office to see if the state of affairs was black as is painted. 'It is only a temporary situation,' said Mr. Kenneth W. McKenzie, after he had heard what the Courier had to say."

"It is true that just at present there is no Frenchman here. The man that used to be here, and who was French, went away for a holiday about four or five weeks ago, as he said he was ill. We do not care to appoint a man in his place until we see whether he is coming back."

"I do not think," continued Mr. McKenzie, "that any Frenchman has suffered at all here, as we have one clerk who can make himself understood in French, and if it was necessary I would call in an interpreter. 'As far as the correspondence is concerned, it is being kept up to date. And I am also making arrangements to have an additional stenographer who will be able to look after the French correspondence altogether."

Accident at Coal Creek.

Fernie, B.C., May 24.—As a result of a runaway train of coal cars in No. 2 mine, Coal Creek, yesterday, two miners named Crockett and Price were seriously injured, the former receiving severe scalp wounds and the latter several broken ribs.

HONOR KING AND WILL NOT RACE

Out of Respect for King Edward Indians Refuse to Take Part in Celebration on 24th.

Victoria, May 24.—All possibility of holding the Victoria Day celebration was abolished when Songhees and Quachichan Indians declined to take part in the Indian war canoe race because of the death of King Edward. The feature of the yearly celebration has always been the Indian war canoe races for which cash prizes are offered. Indians training for the event three years in advance.

"The King was our best friend. He is buried on the 20th, we cannot race on 24th," said Chief Copper of the Songhees tribe to the committee.

USE MOURNING STATIONERY

In Some Government Departments Crests will be Embossed in Purple.

Ottawa, May 24.—During the ensuing six months the official correspondence of the government at all of the departments will be written or printed on mourning paper, large orders for which have been given by the stationery branch of the printing bureau. At distant points government officials will have mourning stationery specially printed and embossed.

It has transpired that quantities of the stationery ordered on the occasion of the death of Queen Victoria were subsequently rejected because the black border was not of the correct width, being half an inch wide instead of three-sixteenths of an inch, which is the official standard. Black bordered and embossed stationery will be used by Canadian trade commissioners and officials of equal rank wherever they may be located during the period of mourning.

For some of the departments the arms or crests will be embossed in purple.

INDIANS ARE ON WAR PATH

Small Uprising in Territory of New Mexico.

SETTLER FENCED INDIAN LAND

Band of Indians Attacked Place, Cutting Fences, Driving Away Cattle and Assaulting Family.

East Las Vegas, New Mexico, May 24.—Gen. E. A. Brook has ordered Company H of the New Mexico Guard at Santa Fe to the scene of a serious Indian outbreak at the ancient Taos Pueblo, seventy miles northwest of here. The troops were dispatched after an appeal had been made to Governor Mills by Judge John R. McFee, who declared that a massacre was imminent. This is the first outbreak in this section since 1897.

The prosecution of several Indians for infractions of the law is said to have caused the outbreak. Telephone and telegraph wires have been cut by the renegades. The Indians on Thursday raided several homesteads north of Taos, cut fences, drove off cattle and assaulted the wife and children of a homesteader, L. S. Myers. Feeling at Taos against the Indians is intense.

Homesteads Are Raided.

Intoxicated Indians from the Pueblo of Taos raided the ranches of homesteaders north of the town and are said to have driven off all the stock, after cutting the wires. The assault on Mrs. Meyers and her babies is the only personal outrage of the kind that has thus far been reported. The Pueblos, being citizens of New Mexico, are amenable to the territorial laws and no longer wards of the United States, except in a restricted sense. Under the law it is required that the sheriff must notify the governor that he is unable to cope with the situation. This information was sent to the governor at Santa Fe yesterday afternoon by Sheriff Elias Quinte, saying that the situation was grave and asking that the troops be sent immediately. Before the sheriff could complete his message, giving the details of the situation, the wires were cut. Indignation is strong and feeling is running high here.

Fenced Indian Lands.

Santa Fe, May 24.—The United States attorney for the Pueblo Indians, Francis G. Wilson, who has returned from Taos, said that the trouble arose over a settler named Meyers fencing in Indian lands, and also a public road over those lands. The Indians had threatened to cut the fence but when Wilson left all was peaceable. Wilson declares that he is convinced peace will soon be restored.

Cranbrook, B.C., May 24.—The erection of the Cranbrook Young Men's Christian Association will shortly be commenced.

THIRST LED TO CAPTURE

Young Train Robbers Could not Stand the Suffering.

ASKED THE SHERIFF FOR WATER

Did not Care About Arrest so Long as They Could Have Something to Drink.

Phoenix, Ariz., May 24.—The awful pangs of thirst led to the arrest of the train robbers who on Monday night held up a train on the East Arizona and robbed the passengers. After the robbery the men escaped to the desert and since then a persistent search has been made for them. Sheriff Carl Hayden with a posse was going over one of the desert trails in an automobile when near Vitrol mine, about eighty miles from the scene of the robbery, a man stepped out on the road and demanded water.

"You are under arrest," declared the sheriff, who with his posse jumped out and surrounded the man.

The man, however, stood utterly fearless of the avowed officers of the law, and the actions of the men around him and pleaded for water. When it was given to him, he drank almost a gallon.

The man was Ernest Woodson, a member of the First Co-operative Building Association, was sentenced today by Justice Gould to imprisonment of one year and one day in the penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga. Gilbert had admitted that as executor of an estate he had appropriated $30,000 which should have gone to the legatee.

SUSPECT MURDER

IN MAN'S DEATH

Was Found on Banks of Red River and was Thought to Have Succumbed.

Winnipeg, May 24.—There is a suspicion of foul play in connection with the death of Percy Howard, supposed to have succumbed on the banks of the Red River. The girl to whom he was engaged stated that it was hard to believe that he had taken his own life without reason. In addition she stated that last Saturday she took $50 from the bank and gave it to him. When found there was very little money in his pockets.

STRUGGLED AGAINST DEATH

Sentenced to be Hung, Man Dangled in air Twenty Minutes.

Walla, Walla, Wash., May 24.—Richard Quinn, sentenced to death for the murder of his wife, dangled at the end of the rope for twenty two and a half minutes and was able to unhook the straps about his arms and drop them to the ground before he struggled to death. The muscles of his neck were abnormally hard and he made them tense just as the trap was springing.

MCLACHLIN FOUND GUILTY OF MURDER

Jury Decides That he Killed his Wife and he is Sentenced to Hang.

Whitby, Ont., May 24.—The jury returned a verdict of guilty at 5.37 o'clock this afternoon in the McLaughlin murder case. The jury was out one and a half hours. McLaughlin seemed dazed when the judge sentenced him to be hanged July 13. He had to be supported by the town constable when leaving the dock.

The crime for which McLaughlin must pay the penalty with his life was that of administering strychnine to his wife, and then burning down his house. The motive for the crime was his infatuation for a young woman named Miss Nix.

BIG BLUNDER

BY SOMEBODY

Overseas Dominions not Mentioned in Proclamation of King.

OMITTED FROM ALL DOCUMENTS

The Words Were First Used on the Accession of King Edward VII.

London, May 24.—No sooner was the splendor of the proclamation ceremonies past than an egregious blunder was discovered which, it was declared, might necessitate the repetition of the entire spectacle.

This was the absence from the official printed programme, as read by the heralds, of the words, among the King's titles, "and for the British Dominions beyond the seas."

This term, formally proclaiming the ruler's title to jurisdiction over the colonies, was first used in the proclamation of the acknowledgment of Edward VII.

Although the form of George's programme was supposed to have been identical with that of his father, the omission occurred not only in the document read to London, but in the official copies used in the provincial cities.

A high court official says that there seemed little likelihood of avoiding a repetition of the pageant and ceremony, if George were to reign legally, but that an investigation had been begun to ascertain if she heralds included the phrase verbally in spite of its absence from the printed documents.

Guilty of Kidnapping.

Holliston, Kan., May 24.—F. H. Tillotson, a detective of Kansas City, was found guilty last night on a charge of kidnapping Marion Bleakley, the "incubator baby." Tillotson acted for Mrs. Barclay of Buffalo.

YOUTH'S PLEA WAS GUILTY

Young Bank Clerk Admits Taking Money From Letter.

COUNSEL ASKS FOR LENIENCY

Says That the Boy was Employed by Bank at Only a Bare Living Wage.

The young bank clerk Holden, came up for trial in the District Court this morning, before Judge Taylor, and was remanded until Tuesday, after pleading guilty, in order to give His Honor time to consider the matter.

Mr. Wilson, for the defence, said that Holden, who was only 16 years of age, had been employed by the Bank of Commerce for six months at a salary of $37.50 per month, which he understood was just a bare living wage. His character was of the best, as testified by his being employed by the bank, who always take particular care in this matter, in connection with their employees; but having no means of existence, other than his salary, he got into debt and was tempted to take the $22 from the registered letter to help him out of his difficulties.

After he had taken the money he paid all his debts and then took a ticket to Winnipeg, where his only relations, his mother and brother, reside. His father had died in England, and his mother was dependent on the two sons for her support.

When he arrived in Winnipeg, he made no effort to leave the country, but secured a position with a lumber company and it was while at home that he was arrested. Mr. Wilson asked that, considering the youth of the prisoner and his hard struggle for existence, the judgment might be as lenient as possible and Holden be given another chance.

His Honor said that it was a serious matter for a youth on the threshold of manhood to be charged with theft, and that, therefore, he would remand him till Tuesday in order to consider the depositions made.

BULLET WENT INTO SHACK

Two Women on First Street Had Narrow Escape.

CAME FROM HIGH POWER RIFLE

Police are Investigating and Believe They Will Land Person who did the Shooting.

While sitting in the front room of her cottage on First Street, near the Fraser avenue, Mrs. P. J. Smith and her little daughter who was reading to her, heard the report of a rifle.

The next instant there was a splintering of wood just beside her, and a bullet crashed through the wall of the house, and struck a box not three feet from the woman.

"I'm shot, it's blinded me," screamed Mrs. Smith. But it was more fright than anything else that had hurt her. So seriously was she affected by the shock, however, that she and her daughter went over to a neighbor's where they were taken care of.

The police were immediately notified of the occurrence, and Chief Lancy and Sgt. Detective Brooks were soon on the spot. A careful search of the shack showed that the bullet had come from the south-east, in the vicinity of Queen's or Fraser avenues, between Heinemann and Picard streets. It had been deflected when it struck the wooden walls of the shack, but had gone right through the wall, and had smashed a box on the opposite side of the room. The police found the bullet, which was a steel jacketed one of .303 calibre, and of the kind used in high-power rifles.

Chief Lancy inclines to the belief that the rifle was discharged in some house, and the police are today making a search of all the dwellings in the vicinity. Before evening they hope to have landed the person who did the shooting, as had the bullet entered the house two feet lower, it would without doubt have struck Mrs. Smith, and might have proved fatal.

A CRIMEAN VETERAN

Wm. Wood has Lived 73 Years and had 21 Children.

(Magrath Pioneer)

Last Sunday, May 1st, was the 73rd birthday of our old pioneer, butcher and Crimean veteran, when we ponder over the stirring events of his life it gives us a great reverence for Magrath's grand old man. Now on the deck of Her Majesty's man-of-war he fought for England's glory on the bleak shores of the Crimea and aided in the capture of that great fortress Sebastopol. After enduring all the hardships and privations of that famous struggle he returned to his native land and received the thanks of Her Gracious Majesty and also a medal for his services in the war. How he took part in the great Crimean war and the establishing of England's trade with Japan. And last but not least how he crossed the plains and established himself in the valleys of the mountains starting the first butcher shop in Salt Lake City. He was one of the first to immigrate to Canada and has done a great deal to colonize this southern country. Wm. Wood is a war veteran, colonizer, theologian and one of the greatest boosters we have in our midst.

Those of his family who are visiting him were his sons: E. J. Ben and Bert and wives, also Angus Wood, Mr. and Mrs. George Janner and also Mr. and Mrs. Trease.

Mr. Wood is hale and hearty and had his twenty-first child in his arms when he gave the Pioneer an interview. We extend him our heartiest congratulations.

Constable Was Fined

Toronto, May 14.—When Henry Daglish, a third-class constable under suspension, boarded a Queen street car and showed an armlet as he got into an argument with the conductor, and the result was a summons to the afternoon Police Court for disorderly conduct.

Also, G. T. Jennings, a passenger, came forward to say that as a result of the argument he had a $50 hat spoiled.

"Five and costs," was the fine imposed by Magistrate Kingsford, "and if he pays you will get the price of the hat."

Division Engineer Resigns

Vancouver, May 14.—Mr. C. E. Cartwright, division engineer of the C. P. R. has resigned that office, and at the end of the present month will leave the service of the company to engage in the private practice of his profession in Vancouver. It is understood that the great growth of Vancouver, and the exceptional opportunities now offering here in the profession of civil engineering, induced Mr. Cartwright to sever his connection with the railway company after having been connected with its engineering staff for eleven years.

Ants Drive out Family

Bedford, Ind., May 14.—Tiny white ants invaded the home of Edward P. Moore, a banker at Mitchell.

The insects, millions of them, are of the flying variety, and have taken complete possession of the Moore house, routing the members of the family.

Everything known was tried to oust the pests without success, and Moore finally obtained the services of Prof. Ferrin, an expert chemist of Columbus, O., to drive out the insects.

FORTUNE WAS BAD FAILURE

So Disappointed Lover had Astrologer Put in Jail.

"WISE" MAN HAD MANY FAILURES

They had Subscribed Large Amount for the Purpose of Buying Him a House.

Paris, May 14.—Is a jilted bride or a disappointed bridegroom justified in lodging a complaint against a fortune-teller, if the "fortune" has not turned out as it was predicted? Such it seems, is now the case submitted to a Paris magistrate concerning a man described as an astrologer, inhabiting one of the picturesque heights on the outskirts of the city and who has had customers enough to populate a large town. Young and old have come to him to have their future revealed. Girls wanted to know if they were going to marry, soldiers asked if they were going to be happy, and the young men wanted to know how to find the brunettes or the blonde that would suit them with a handsome dowry while widows looked for a second husband, and disappointed lovers wanted to know how fate would revenge them.

The so-called astrologer has, it seems, been giving satisfaction to all until recently. Some of his customers, finding that the predictions did not exactly come out as they had expected, vented their discontent in a formal complaint, which they lodged with a magistrate. A police officer was appointed to inquire into the case, and the first discovery which he made was that the fortune-teller had a vast "practice," which the most successful practitioner might envy. He had as many as 1,000 customers in all ranks of society.

When applied to he would readily, and without exacting a fee, cast the horoscope of the applicant. If more was wanted, the price was $10 for complete "fortune," $5 for one less complete, 15 francs for five years, etc. Those who encouraged the alleged astrologer actually proposed a sort of association of his followers, to be called the "Universal Fraternal and Spiritualist Union," with the object of buying him a house, to cost about $50,000, to be built somewhere in the country, preferably on a high spot, and with a nice garden round it. Much of the money, it seems, had already been subscribed, when this complaint came along to interfere with the scheme.

In passing, it may be said that the following of an astrologer or fortune-teller is not only of the legally recognized professions in France, and the police have from time to time tried to check the practice. But so many disappointed lovers, prospective brides, and jilted spinsters, and perplexed specimens of the human sex long so much to have their fortunes told by men with foretelling laurels and wizard's sticks that the police gave up as hopeless the attempt to suppress the practice, and committed the goings-on of astrologers and their clients. The one against whom the complaint has been lodged is no alter and no worse than his colleagues, and is going about in full liberty, carrying on his trade unmolested by the police, which he hopes will turn out to his advantage.

Died in Dentist's Chair.

Trinidad, Colo., May 14.—Paralysis of the heart caused by fright and the effect of the fumes of chloroform caused the death of Mrs. Ethel Vaughn, wife of John Vaughn, a cook, the other afternoon while sitting in a dentist's chair.

A post-mortem examination tonight revealed no abnormal condition and the doctors state that fright was one of the chief causes of death.

Before going to the dentist's office, Mrs. Vaughn met a woman friend whom she told of her intention of having a tooth extracted, and said: "Remember, if I die, I am ready to go."

Favorite Dog Mourns King

London, May 14.—Roaming about the streets, looking for the familiar face of its master, the King, is one of the most disconsolate of mourners. It is the late King's favorite dog, Caesar, a rough-haired terrier. He was the King's constant companion, going with him on every journey, and sharing his room. Many are the stories told of Caesar. At lunch one day at Biarritz, when Caesar was receiving his usual bone from the King's hand, a guest at the Royal table observed that the dog should be getting familiar with the language of the French. "I am afraid," said the King, "he gets along very badly with them. In fact, he is anything but a help to the entente cordiale."

Prof. Law, of Knox College, who has been assisting in the services of St. Andrew's Church, will, it is understood, be asked by the congregation to become its pastor in succession to Rev. Dr. Milligan, who will be appointed minister of the church. Dr. Milligan will probably say farewell to the church on May 29, and take a rest of a year in the old land.

Had Presentiment of King's Illness?

London, May 14.—The World, the society paper, printed by Edmund Yates, says that it has the best authority for stating that Queen Alexandra had a presentiment while she was at Corin that her husband was on the verge of a dangerous illness. This presentiment was so strong that, although she intended to stay another week, she left at short notice for Calais. But for this presentiment, she says, she would hardly have arrived in time to attend the final scenes at the deathbed.

RICH HINDOO IS KEPT OUT

Owns Property in Canada but Cannot Get in.

TESTING THE IMMIGRATION LAW

The Trouble is That he Comes From Seattle, not Direct From India.

Naraj Singh, the educated Hindu capitalist, has been turned back from the Canadian border and denied admittance to the Dominion. He now is in Seattle meditating upon the immigration laws of this country and planning, with the aid of his friends in this city, some new move which will gain him admittance to the Province of British Columbia.

A couple of weeks ago Naraj Singh, who has a thorough education in English and is a property owner on this side of the boundary line, was chosen as a desirable vehicle by which to apply a test to the immigration regulation of the Dominion government which requires that incoming settlers shall proceed directly by straight ticket from the land of their birth or adoption. Naraj Singh, who had been residing in Seattle since leaving India, accordingly set off for Vancouver on one of the C. P. R. steamers, but was promptly ordered back to the Sound city without being allowed to land here. He obeyed the official mandate but he and his friends stated at the time that another attempt would be made to secure his admittance to the country.

The other try was made on Sunday, when Naraj Singh, large as life and looking as natural as ever, stepped from the Great Northern train in company with a fellow-countryman, but Immigration Inspector Hopkinson was prepared for his unswerving guests and again the Hindu pursued his disappointed way back to the place where the Seattle spirit blooms and grows.

What the next move in the game will be the leaders of the Hindus in this city are not prepared to state at present, though they say they will spare no effort to bring an immigration case into the courts and the justice for full recognition of the rights they claim as British subjects will be pushed here while powerful representatives are putting their case before the imperial authorities in London.

COMET STILL TO THE FORE

Held Accountable for Anything That Goes Wrong.

SCIENTISTS HAVE MANY THEORIES

South African Blacks Say it is a Chariot to Carry King's Soul to Heaven.

Paris, May 14.—Maurice Hanny, of the Paris observatory, reports that the length of the tail of Halley's Comet has increased from five to ten degrees in three days. Prof. Deslandres, of the university of Dijon, finds an appearance in the spectroscopic of cyanogen, the poisonous gas which was observed in January and February, but which disappeared in March. He says that the hypothesis that gas is liable to affect the terrestrial atmosphere was just as it should be. On the other hand Camille Flammarion thinks that the tail of the comet is simply an optical illusion produced by the light through ether, similar to the wake of a ship at sea. M. Marchand maintains that the comet shows important variations from its predicted orbit, which presages unexpected surprises.

Comet Blamed for Weather

The most extraordinary weather it has known perhaps in its history has visited the French capital in the last few days. The French attribute it to the Lame Rousse of Red Moon, covering a period that corresponds roughly with that which in America is supposed to be under the stormy influence of St. Swin. It would be hard to find a date in the last thirty days on which it has not rained. On Sunday last there were all kinds of weather in a dozen hours, from general sunshine to heavy downpour and the temperature was equally changeable. About midday a tremendous fall of large hail came, lasting half an hour and once since then this experience has been repeated though in milder form. It is impossible to predict the weather from one hour to another. Great coats yesterday were an absolute necessity. A large part of the population attribute the vagaries of the weather to the nearness of the comet and leading astronomers themselves admit that there is nothing improbable in this theory.

Comet Was Josephus' Sword

London, May 14.—The Greenwich astronomer, E. C. D. Crommelin, has stated in a lecture that the sword which Josephus says hung over Jerusalem before its fall was probably Halley's Comet.

Think Comet is Funeral Chariot. Durham, South Africa, May 14.—The death of King Edward coinciding with the appearance of Halley's Comet which is now visible here, has created a belief in the minds of the natives that the stellar vagrant is nothing more than a fiery chariot to carry the white king's soul to heaven. As a result there have been great incantations among the tribes here.

Toronto's Aviation Meet

Toronto, May 14.—Toronto is to have an aviation meet late in July. The Ontario Motor League is furthering the project.

R. L. Borden on tour

Ottawa, May 14.—During the latter fortnight of June, Mr. R. L. Borden will hold a series of public meetings in Ontario.

He will speak at some nine or ten points in the agricultural districts, the object of his itinerary being to get in touch with the Ontario farmers. The gatherings will take the form of picnics.

Released, Died Going Home

San Francisco, Cal., May 14.—Less than twenty-four hours after his discharge from the Alameda jail, where he had served a year's sentence for land fraud, John A. Benson, a Contra Costa county millionaire, dropped dead yesterday morning while motoring to his ranch near San Ramon.

Benson was a co-defendant with Dr. Edward B. Perrin, the Arizona millionaire, in indictments charging land frauds in Tolama county.

He was one of the persons mentioned in the Finger Herman and the Hyde-Benson Diamond land fraud case tried in Washington.

Nails Himself to Cross

San Bernardino, Cal., May 14.—While brooding over the possible ill effects of the comet's visit, Paul Hammetton, a sheepman and a prospector, became insane and crucified himself, according to mining men who arrived here with him yesterday. Hammetton was found where he had nailed his feet and one hand to a rude cross he had erected near a gold claim last Friday.

Clay Letters!!!

When one comes to consider the whole question of this clay proposition, one is driven more and more to the conclusion that there is but one future for it, and that is the possession of one of the greatest monopolies Canada has ever seen for many years. There is not a single firm in opposition in the whole West, so far as is known, and the demand for these Sewer pipes is enormous already and growing every year by leaps and bounds.

Calgary has just placed a large order for the current year from Ohio, the sizes run from 4 to 10 inch and the total bill amounts to about $100,000. It will take 200 cars to bring the shipment. This is one city only, and every year there is a greater mileage required.

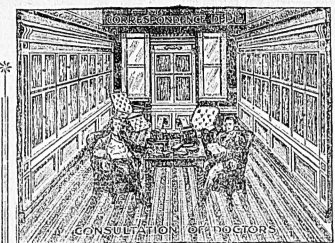

The figures quoted are from the Western Canada Trade Gazette, and only serve to emphasize the fact that the output is almost unlimited. Every foot of pipe now coming into the West pays a duty of 33 per cent. It is an unheard of chance to step in and "cinch" up the trade right now.

Taking the cost of production at the fair average price of labour and fuel, allowing for breakage and waste, the estimate for the plant which the Twin Cities are offered in the share of this Western Clays Limited can turn out sufficient to pay for 200 working days a net profit of 100 per cent per annum. That means for every investor gets his full money back every year. It seems almost childish to suppose that anyone can consider any other investment alongside this.

It only takes $10 down with the application and $15 upon allotment, with a further $25 at three months, to secure a share in this splendid concern. Every man and woman who can put up $10 now, $15 in say thirty days and a further $25 in three months should hesitate not one second, but go right to the offices of the company, 118 McDougall Avenue, and enquire all about the Company.

Henry Clay.

THE PORT OF MISSING MEN

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON

Author of "The House of a Thousand Candles"

COPYRIGHT, 1906, BY THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

"Trust Winkler not to do his full duty. You must not forget that the arch-stroked man sleeps in the long sleep and that many masses have already been said for the repose of his intrepid soul."

"The splendor of our undertaking is enough to draw his ghost from the grave. Until by this time Znal should have died our colleagues at the Springs and got your mail at the hotel. I hope you have not misplaced your confidence in the operator there. Consider that our ghost must pass Armitage's house."

"Trust him to pass it. His encounter with Armitage have not been to his credit."

The two men were dressed in rough clothes, as for an outing, and in spite of the habitual trifling tone of their talk they were a serious air. Durand's eyes danced with excitement, and he twisted his mustache nervously. Chauvenet had gone to Washington to meet Durand, to get from him news of the progress of the conspiracy in Vienna and not least to get over crossing the Atlantic. "I do not require watching, my dear Durand," he had said.

"A man in love, dearest Jules, sometimes forgets." But they had gone into the Virginia hills unaided and were quarreled with a postmaster. They walked now to Znal, whom they had sent to the Springs with a message and to get Chauvenet's mail. Armitage, they had heard, used the Lamar telegraph office, and they had decided to carry their business elsewhere.

While they waited in the bare upper room of the fan for Znal the big Serbian tramped up the mountain side, his head bowed and a heart of woe with dread. The horse he had left tied in a thicket when he plunged down through the Chalmere place had broken down and run away, so that he must now trudge back alone to report to his masters. He had made a mess of his errands and nearly lost his life besides. The bullet from Oscar's revolver had cut a neat furrow in his scalp, which was growing sore and sore as it itched beneath. He would undoubtedly be dealt with harshly by Chauvenet and Durand, but he knew that the sooner he reported the better, so he hurried to the Lamar, pausing at times to clasp his small head in his great hands. When he passed the wild man of the valley Armitage's bungalow he paused and

"Fish! We are not discussing the young lady."

"I can understand how unpleasant the subject must be to you, my dear Jules. What you imagine she knows of Mr. Armitage? If he is the man we think he is, and as possible her to great threat, it would be impossible for her to marry him."

"His tastes are democratic. In Montana he is quite popular. A Montana Durand flung away his cigarette and laughed suddenly."

"Has it occurred to you that this whole affair is decidedly amusing? Here we are in one of the free American states about to turn a card that will deprive a king if we are lucky. And here is a man we are trying to get out of the way—a man we might make king if he were not a fool and a scoundrel. It touches my sense of humor, my dear Jules!"

"An exclamation from Znal arrested them. The Serbian looked up his horse, and they were instantly at his side. They had reached a point near the hunting preserve in the main highway. It was about half past a clock, an hour at which Virginia mountain roads are usually free of travelers, and the pace of Znal's laggard beast permitted."

The best of a horse's hoofs could be heard quite distinctly in the road ahead of them. The road tended downward, and the strain of the ascent was marked in the approaching animal's walk. In a moment the two men heard the horse's quick short of satisfaction as it reached level ground. Then, seeing the other animals, it threw up its head and neighed shrilly.

"The dusk of starlight durnd Znal and himself and felt the Serbian's hand, rough hand touch his in passing the bridge of his horse."

"Who?" said the Serbian.

The horse of the unknown paused, neighed again and refused to go farther. A man's shadow encouraged him to low tones. The horses of Chauvenet's party danced about restlessly, responsive to the nervousness of the strange beast before them.

"Who goes there?"

The stranger's horse was quiet for an instant, and the tones of his voice were a sound as sure as a word to murder, and his vilification by an angered employer did not greatly trouble him, particularly since he understood little of Chauvenet's rapid German.

In half an hour Chauvenet was again in a fury, leaving for Lamar that the operator had gone down the road twenty miles to a dance and

"could not be back until morning. The imperious Durand shivered in the night and prodded Chauvenet with ironies."

"We have no time to lose. That message must go tonight. You may be sure Mr. Armitage will not send it for us. Come, we've got to go down to Storm Springs."

They rode away in the starlight, leaving the postmaster alarmed and wondering. Chauvenet and Durand were well mounted on horses that Chauvenet had sent into the hills in advance of his own coming. Znal rode grim and silent on a clumsy plow horse, which was the best he could find to ride for him. The knife was not the only weapon he had known in Serbia. He carried a pointo sack across his saddle horns. Chauvenet and Durand sent him ahead to set the pace with his inferior mount. They talked together in low tones as they followed.

"He is not so big a fool, this Armitage," remarked Durand. "He is quite deep, in fact. I wish it were he were trying to establish a post office for crossing the Atlantic. 'I do not require watching, my dear Durand,' he had said."

"I gave him his chance down there in the valley, and he declined it. He is quite possible that he is not a coward."

"Then he would not be a safe king. Our young friend in Vienna is a good deal of a fool and altogether a coward. We shall have to provide him with a bullet."

"If we fail," began Chauvenet.

"You suggest a faithful but unpleasant topic. If we fail we must be fortunate if we reach the mountain side of the Argentine for future residence. Paris and Vienna would not know us again. If Winkler should see us, we and we lose here, where do we arrive?"

"We arrive quite where Mr. Armitage would like to see us. He is a gentleman of resources; he has money; he laughs cheerfully at misadventures; he has had you watched by the shrewdest eyes in the valley. You are considered a hard man to keep track of, my dear Durand. And not least important, he has tonight snatched away that telegram that was the key to Winkler to go ahead. He is a very annoying and vexatious person, this Armitage. Even Znal, whose knife made him a terror in Serbia, seems unable to cope with him."

"And the fair daughter of the valley?"

"Fish! We are not discussing the young lady."

"I can understand how unpleasant the subject must be to you, my dear Jules. What you imagine she knows of Mr. Armitage? If he is the man we think he is, and as possible her to great threat, it would be impossible for her to marry him."

In half an hour Chauvenet was again in a fury, leaving for Lamar that the operator had gone down the road twenty miles to a dance and

him across the threshold. Durand, aroused, fastened the horses to the veranda rail.

Chauvenet caught up some candles from the mantel and lighted them.

"Open the trunks in those rooms and be quick. I will join you in a moment." And as Durand turned into Armitage's room Chauvenet peered again into the other chambers, called his arms were hung up to protect his head, over which Znal tried to force the knife.

"The knife?" bawled the Serbian.

"Not answered Chauvenet."

"The devil!" yelled the rider, and dug his spurs into the rearing beast's flanks.

Chauvenet held on valiantly with both hands to the horse's head. Once the frightened beast swung him clear of the ground. A few yards distant Durand sat on his own horse and held the bridle of the others. He soothed the restless animals in low tones, the light of his cigarette shaking oddly in the dark with the movement of his lips.

The horse crept with his left arm while the right drew the sack down over the head and shoulders of the prisoner.

"The him," said Chauvenet, and Znal buckled a strap about the man's arms and bound them tight.

The dust in the bag caused the man inside to cough, but save for the one exclamation he had not spoken. Chauvenet and Durand conferred in low tones while Znal drew out a tether strap and snapped it to the curb of the captive's horse.

"The fellow takes it pretty coolly," remarked Durand, lighting a fresh cigarette. "What are you going to do with him?"

"We will take him to his own place. It is near—and close the papers out of him. Then we'll find a precipice and toss him over. It is a simple matter."

Znal handed Chauvenet the revolver he had taken from the silent man on the horse.

"I am ready," he reported.

"Go ahead," they followed. And they started toward the bungalow. Znal riding beside the captive and holding fast to the led horse. Where the road was smooth they sent the horses forward at a smart trot. But the captive turned and snarled and holding fast to the led horse. Where the road was smooth they sent the horses forward at a smart trot. But the captive turned and snarled and holding fast to the led horse. Where the road was smooth they sent the horses forward at a smart trot. But the captive turned and snarled and holding fast to the led horse.

The objects which Durand held caused Chauvenet to stare, and then he laughed again. Durand had caught up from a book in Armitage's room a black cloak, so long that it trailed at length from his arms, its red lining glowing brightly where it lay against the dark lines. From the folds of the cloak a sword, plucked from a trunk, dropped upon the floor with a gleam of its bright scabbard. In his right hand he held a silver box of orders, and as his arm fell at the sight of Chauvenet's gay ribbons and gleaming pendants he smiled to the two men.

"It is not Armitage; we have made a mistake," muttered Chauvenet tamely, his eyes fixed on Chauvenet's face to the cloak, the sword, the tangled heap of ribbons on the floor.

Durand stepped forward, with an oath.

"Who is the man?" he demanded.

"It is my friend Captain Claborn. We owe the gentleman an apology," Chauvenet began.

"You put it badly," cried Claborn in English, his lack to the fireplace, his arm folded and the smile gone from his face. "I don't know your companions, Mr. Chauvenet, but you seem inclined to the habits of kidnapping and murder. Really, Monsieur."

"It is a mistake. It is unpardonable. I can only offer you reparation—anything you ask," stammered Chauvenet.

"You are looking for John Armitage, are you?" demanded Claborn hotly without heeding Chauvenet's words.

"Mr. Armitage is not here. He was in Storm Springs tonight at my house. He is a brave gentleman, and I warn you that you and his men are in a struggle here, or stick a knife into me if you will be better satisfied that way, or you will kill me and hide his bones in these hills; but, by God, there will be no escape for you! The highest powers of my government know that I am here. Baron von Markhof knows that I am here. I have no engagement to breakfast with Baron von Markhof at his house at 8 o'clock in the morning, and if I am not there every agency of the government will be put to work to find you. Mr. Jules Chauvenet and these other scoundrels who travel with you."

"You are violent, my dear Sir," began Durand, whose voice was coming back to him much quicker than Chauvenet's.

"I am not as violent as I shall be if I get a drop of cavalry from the hills above here and hunt you like rabbits through the hills. And I advise you to cable Winkler at Vienna that the game is all off."

Chauvenet suddenly jumped toward the table, the revolver still swinging at arm's length.

"You know me too much."

"I don't know any more than Armitage and Baron von Markhof and my friends down the honorable secretary of state, to say nothing of the equally honorable secretary of war."

Five Hundred After Pig

Most Exciting Sporting Event Jersey City has had.

Jersey City, N. J., May 13.—The most exciting event New Jersey has known this year was an impromptu hunt yesterday with four mounted policemen and six infantry cops, and 500 civilians participating in the pursuit of one small pig.

He wasn't an ordinary porker, destined for ham, chops, and bacon. He was an educated pig being shipped to Boston, where he was going to do tricks for the amusement of the scholars.

The pig was in a crate in the rear of an express wagon with John White driving. He roared at one of the state of the crate, tore it away, squeezed out and was jounced to the street. He made off in an opposite direction and White was a block away before Mounted Policeman Murphy shouted:

"Hey—you've lost your pig!"

The man was not John Armitage, but Captain Claborn.

the strap, drew off the bag and stepped back toward the table on which he had laid his revolver for easier access.

"Mr. John Armitage?"

Chauvenet, his revolver half raised, had begun an ironical speech, but his words died on his lips. The man who stood blinking from the sudden burst of light was not John Armitage, but Captain Claborn.

The perspiration on Claborn's face had made a paste of the dirt from the potato sack, which gave him a weird appearance. He grinned broadly, adding a fantastic horror to his visage which caused Znal to leap back toward the door. Then Chauvenet cried aloud, a cry of anger, which brought Durand into the hall at a jump. Claborn shrugged his shoulders, shook the blood into his numbed arms and turned his beaming face toward Durand and laughed. He laughed loud and loud as the stupefaction deepened on the faces of the two men.

The objects which Durand held caused Claborn to stare, and then he laughed again. Durand had caught up from a book in Armitage's room a black cloak, so long that it trailed at length from his arms, its red lining glowing brightly where it lay against the dark lines.

York, rector of St. Patrick's Roman Catholic church here, has come out for Sunday baseball and athletic exercises, and expects, he says, soon to establish a diamond upon which baseball can be enjoyed after attending religious services on Sundays. Father York estimates that fully one-third, or possibly more, of the young men of Huntingdon are members of his church.

"If I find it possible to make the necessary arrangements I shall have a diamond laid out on the property adjoining the church cemetery," said Father York. "I will offer this land free. The young men of my church make it a custom to attend religious services Sunday morning, and, having done their duty to God, they feel entitled to spend the rest of the day as they like, so long as they break no law and do not interfere with any other person's liberty."

baseball and tennis was the order of the day. Some good fishing stories are told as a result of the day's sport.
The tennis courts were filled for almost the whole day. Little planting and decorating took place on account of this having been done earlier in the spring.

FAMILY FLED
FROM FLAMES

Terrible Experiences of a Minnesota
Settler and his Family.

WERE FIVE DAYS SEEKING SAFETY

Travelled Through Burning Forests, Suffering from Cold at Night and Narrowly Escaping Drowning.

Grand Marais, May 14.—John B.
Elwing and his wife, with their month old baby and their six other children, the eldest of whom is fifteen years old, are being cared for in a temporary hospital here following a heart-breaking forty-mile trip through the sparsely settled and flaring forests between here and Upper Brule Lake. It took them five days to cover the distance and they were almost exhausted, almost burned and almost frozen to death. Two of the smaller children were saved from a danger in the swift current of the Brule river by a giant Newfoundland dog.
Fleeing homesteaders have left the district in confusion. When Elwing and his family were routed from their beds early Sunday morning by advancing forest fires on all sides, they heated a hasty retreat with a small stock of provisions. The smoke almost suffocated and all homes to be left and fearing the unknown perils which might await them in the unmapped forest, the stock astounded by the shores of the lake and Brule river.
The first day and night they covered fifty miles, so near to deers, beavers and other wild beasts that El-wing was forced to shoot them to one side to furnish passage for his terrified family. The crackling of timber in the underbrush and the roar of the wind swept blaze through the trees took overhead rang constantly in their ears. Burned and almost frozen, the woman was overcome by fatigue. She became hysterical and would not permit her husband to carry the babe. They reached a new settlement and replenished their exhausted provisions.

The night winds from Lake Superior chilled them to the marrow and living amidst a fire in a vegetable cave where they huddled for the night.
In the morning he discovered the forest fire impossible. The next midnight when the glow ahead seemed to have died out the fugitives again set forth. The preceding day they miles, when suddenly, upon rounding a bend in the river, they faced a terrible furnace, speeding through the dry and cracking timbers towards them. Elwing with his axe cut limbs from trees on the bank, toughed a favorable place in the stream and stationed himself and his family deep in the water underneath a wet screen of underbrush, which they saturated from time to time until the fire burst out. The four-day surrounding fires again forced them to retreat to the same article, but the deep river halled between narrow banks and two of the younger children who ventured too far out were swept in and lost. The mother and dog, who had so far, by swimming the river evaded the flames, helped Elwing to rescue them.

Thursday morning the family reached an abandoned homestead, where they found an ox and cart in which they made the rest of the journey to Grand Marais.

Boat Averted Famine

Juneau, Alaska, May 14.—The schooner Anita Phillips, as back from Yakutat. The captain reports that that place was on the verge of famine when he reached there. The only supplies they had was beans and a small amount of tea. The Phillips had 16 tons of supplies for the store at Yakutat, which will last this summer.

No steamer had called at the port for eight months and none is expected this summer. There are about 35 persons at Yakutat and all have considerable money. They live by beach-placers and fishing.

Flocking Into Grand Prairie.
F. A. Johnston, formerly of Lacombe, now of Beaver Lodge, Grand Prairie, writes to the Lacombe Globe:

"We arrived at Grand Prairie on March 14, being forty-three days from the time we left Lacombe. Here things doing with a rush up here.
Lots of settlers flocking in to take a chance at the last Great West great many men are bringing in their claims this year and the Prairie will soon be thickly populated as the Lacombe district. Then when the railway is built across Grand Prairie and on to the coast which from present indications will be at no distant date, we shall have all that heart could desire, for it is a well-known and undisputed fact that this is one of the richest countries in natural resources of the North American continent.

Not a Duel but Murder

Yreka, Cal., May 14.—That a double murder has been committed was proven yesterday by the autopsies performed on the bodies of two men found dead near Yreka, where it was at first believed had killed each other in a duel. The nature of the wounds, however, showed this to be impossible. There is no clue to the identity of the dead men, farther than that both were loggers.
